

SUGAR STOCK SPECULATORS GO WILD OVER NEWS FROM CAPITAL

Enormous Gains in Price of Local Issues; Oiaa Jumps From $4.75 to $7.75 Per Share

Fortunes have been made overnight by the enormous speculative increase in the market price of sugar stocks listed on the Honolulu Stock & Bond Exchange.

As soon as the Star-Bulletin's exclusive announcement that the policy of the secretary of the treasury would be to retain the present duty on sugar was published, the "wise ones" began to lay in long lines of stocks yesterday afternoon. Buying orders came in with considerable pressure and sellers were sitting tight. By the time business was resumed downtown early this morning stocks were kiting. Oiaa, for instance, which went begging yesterday at noon around $4.75, was in demand at 9 o'clock this morning at $7.75, and other issues were showing similar strength.

By the time "change" opened, however, more advances had taken place, and Oiaa, around which the principal speculative buying of the day centered, sold at $7.50, and later at $7.75—a net gain in less than three hours of $3 per share.

The market was erratic, and showed by its closing quotations that it was unbalanced by heavy speculative orders. McBryde for instance, a stock in much stronger position than Oiaa, and with two dividends to its credit this year, advanced only $1.50 in comparatively light sales, while Onomea went from $32 to $33 per share. Bonds held steady without change, and the miscellaneous list, though rather neglected, showed no advancing tendencies.

Among the sensational advances made this morning are the following, last sale prices and today's closing bids being used in each case:

Ewa from $20 to $24.75, Hawaiian Commercial from $25.50 to $29.50; Hawaiian Sugar from $36 to $37.50; Hokua from $5 to $6.50; Hutchinson from $19 to $20; McBryde from $6.75 to $8; Oahu Sugar from $23 to $27; Oiaa from $4.75 to $7.75; Onomea from $32 to $33; Pioneer from $26 to $28.50 and Waijua from $12.75 to $24.25.

NEWS OF SUGAR TARIFF RETENTION SENDS JOY THROUGHOUT TERRITORY

Union Club in San Francisco, held on December 18, 1913," says the governor, "that in my opinion free sugar would not go into effect on the first of May, 1916. I have expressed this belief on all public occasions, and in private conferences since that time."

"We had good grounds to believe," continues the governor, "that when a proper presentation of the sugar situation, and of sugar facts were disseminated and truthfully placed before the administration and Congress that they would be considered and logically acted upon."

"Evidently this procedure has in a degree taken place with corresponding and contemplated action in legislation."

Referring to the letters sent from Washington, D. C., by W. R. Farrington, who has recently spent some days there, the governor says: "Mr. Farrington, as I judge from his recent letters, evidently comprehends suitable procedure along these lines."

A view that epitomizes popular opinion was given today by J. M. Dowsett, president of the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Association, who, however, spoke personally and not as the official head of the planters' organization, in response to the Star-Bulletin's request for a statement he said:

"While I cannot assume to speak for the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Association as an organization, as there has been no opportunity for a discussion by the trustees of the subject of the cable news from Washington yesterday, it strikes me to be the most encouraging news that Hawaii, and the sugar industry in particular, has received for some time past."

"The significant feature of the statement attributed to Secretary McAdoo, as cabled here, was that it was a 'formal' announcement, an indication to me of what may be expected as a recommendation by the administration to the next Congress.

"In passing it should be noted that the temporary retention of the present duty on sugar is proposed undoubtedly to meet demand for revenue and for revenue only, because of the special exigencies of the 'preparation' program which the nation is demanding, and in no way to be considered a change of front in the Democratic tariff policy."

"In any event, the concession will be our salvation for the present, and we are grateful, but we must hope that the campaign of education which we have been carrying on to remove the popular fallacy that the sugar tariff is a burden on the consumer will eventually bear fruit, which will insure our permanent future protection."

"Let me congratulate Hawaii, and the sugar industry more especially on the encouraging news received yesterday."

"This news should mean a long period of stable prosperity for Hawaii," said A. M. Nowell, manager of the Sugar Factors Company, Ltd., this morning, discussing the news from Washington.

"Secretary McAdoo is President Wilson's son-in-law and a formal announcement from him means that the retention of the sugar duty will be a government measure. The sugar tariff would not have been tampered with by Congress but for the president's personal insistence, and there is no doubt but that Congress will gladly vote for the retention of the present tariff."

"Hawaii will have a preferential of roughly $20 a ton over Cuban sugar by the retention of the present tariff, and a preferential of $25 over all other foreign sugars. This will be most welcome in these islands and is a fair figure, comparative production and transportation handicaps considered."

TWO NEW LEADERS IN LIMELIGHT OF WORLD'S BIG BASEBALL SERIES

championship team, is a product of a New England mill. Like Connie Mack, who left a Massachusetts shoe factory to win fame, Pat Moran gave up a job in a textile mill in Fitchburg, Mass., to make a name in his favorite pastime.

Moran was born in Fitchburg a little more than 40 years ago, and at an early age found his way to a job in a mill. There is a story told that young Pat first became an adept in handling a ball by playing with yarn balls. In any event he easily took to baseball and as he grew up he played on amateur teams in Fitchburg. He caught most of the time and sometimes played in the infield. He first came into general notice as a catcher for the Fitchburg Athletic Club.

Moran was so good that he was offered a place on the Central Parks team of Orange, Mass., where he played in 1895 and 1896, and then, as all good ball players do, he found his way to larger fields. In 1897 Moran was with the Lyons team of the New York State League, catching 76 games. The next year he caught 93 for the same club. In 1899 Moran was purchased by the Montreal Club of the old Eastern League, and 1900 found him behind the bat on the Boston National League grounds. He spent five years with that team and then joined the Chicago Nationals and was with the Cubs when it was a championship ball club.

Fate sent Moran to the Philadelphia Nationals in 1910 as a second string catcher. Charles S. Doolan was then the star and Pat did not get many chances to show his worth behind the bat, and in the last few years of his career with the Phillies he was used to help develop pitchers. In this he had a wonderful success. Many give Moran credit for making Grover C. Alexander the pitcher he is today. He helped also to develop Pitchers Mayer and Eppa Rixey.

Moran's selection to manage the Phillies came as a surprise to the baseball world, as it was not thought he had ambition in that line. The first intimation that he might succeed Doolan came during the world series last year and shortly afterwards the announcement was made.

From a disorganized ball club due to numerous changes, Moran welded together a smooth harmonious team of players. In the spring no one picked the Quakers to win. They opened the season by winning eight games straight. Despite numerous predictions that the team would crack Moran kept them in front. Pennant talk among the players was barred by Moran. Each day the team went out to win the game of that day. Moran sought to produce harmony among the players. The players respected him and the result was that things moved along just as the new baseball general had planned them.

Manager William F. Carrigan will be the first playing manager to figure in a world series in several years. He has specialized in catching his left-handed twirlers, and will be behind the bat in games pitched by Leonard and Ruth. Never a great catcher mechanically, Carrigan for many years has been credited with being a better aid to the pitcher in determining the weaknesses of batters and taking advantage of their knowledge of any backstop in the league.

Like several other members of the Red Sox, he is a college man. He came to Boston from Holy Cross in 1907. The following season he was sent to Toronto of the Eastern League for experience, returning to Boston a reliable catcher and a good batter at the close of the Eastern season. He has been with Boston since.

As a player, Carrigan has occupied a peculiar position under several local managements. His practical knowledge of the game was rated so highly that manager after manager called upon him for assistance. This was particularly true in the 1912 world series when Manager Jake Stanwood called Carrigan and Heinie Wagner to serve with him as joint members of an unofficial board of strategy.

This board, which frequently had the benefit of advice from President James R. McTier, himself an old player and manager, met twice a day during that series, in the morning before members of the team gathered as a body, and in the evening after the game. At the first meeting they mapped the plan of campaign for the game of that day; in the later session they discussed the failures and successes of the game which had passed and the application of their observations to those that were to come. The result was a Red Sox success.

A somewhat similar board has grown up in the American league pennant winners of this year. Carrigan and Wagner again are members, and the manager has called into the council his field captain, Barry, with the latter's learning from the school of Carrigan, and his observations on many fields at his command.

The combination has proved a happy one. Carrigan and Wagner are bound personally by the ties of nearly a decade of companionship as members of the same team, room-mates, in fact; and Carrigan and Barry bound by earlier association as members of the same college team. Barry having played with Holy Cross during Carrigan's last year there. It is believed that their deliberations will play a large part in the playing plans of the series this year.

LEGAL OPINION ON BIG SERIES BY LAWYER-FAN

phians apparently have the best of it. Moran has not only formed a perfect machine, but he has kept it going without a break throughout the year and brought it up to the world series in perfect condition. All that can be said of Carrigan is that he has been a harmonizing influence in a club of stars.

As to catchers, whether Killifer is in condition again to catch, Eddy Burns can catch the series and is fully the equal of Cady, Carrigan or Thomas.

The Pitchers.
The pitching staff for the Red Sox is far superior—probably the best staff ever collected, certainly of left-handers—by Leonard and Ruth, left-handers, and Foster and Shore, right-handers, are all going at their best game. Besides these, Groves, another left-hander, while not available for a full game, is as good as any of them for a part of a game. The phenomenon is that, dropping Shore out, these pitchers are hitting at a clip of nearly 400, and Ruth is considered one of the best cleanup hitters in the country. On the other hand, Alexander is today the best pitcher in the country, Mayer, Demaree, and Chalmers are going well. Mayer has not been lucky, Chalmers is not a great pitcher, and Demaree is only successful with certain clubs; for instance, Cincinnati, has not won a game from him this year, excepting one lost by an error of Gravath, wonderful to relate, letting in the only run in the game. Alexander finds the Red Sox to his liking. It will be the end of two games, and it will be.

The Infielders.
Hohlfeld and Gainer are fair first-basemen and good hitters, while Luder is a great hitter and better fielder. Gainer will be put in should Philadelphia use a left-hander, which is unlikely, as all their best pitchers are right-handers. Barry, at second and Scott at short are a good combination. Barry has been hitting better this year, but on the whole the pair are inferior to Bancroft and Niehoff, both in hitting and as a combination. Philadelphia has in Stock, who will undoubtedly play the equal of Gardner, a third base hitting and fielding. As a matter of fact Gardner is slipping this year and Stock is coming.

The Outfielders.
As to the outfield, I cannot agree with the general opinion. The famous Red Sox outfield is also slipping a little. Speaker is not quite getting his man in the field, Trapper, while he covers his field well, does not get his three base hits in at the opportune time as of old, and for that matter, Speaker's hits are not so opportune. Duffy Lewis alone this year has been reliable as a cleanup hitter, and he has not been doing so well the last part of the season. Again, he will not have the advantage of his skill in negotiating the bank in the left field at Fenway park, as his chances are to be played on the Boston ground.

On the other hand, Philadelphia has an outfield such as warms every pitcher's heart. Paiker is covering his entire field as of old and hitting on the whole better. Enough has been said about Whitted, and the things which has not been said here about Gravath is that this year he has got the throw to the plate down pat; he covers the ground and has cut off many a run. On paper the hitting of the Boston trio would appear much superior. As a matter of fact, no man in any team in the country has done so much to win games as the bat as Gravath. He is at the top of the National League in runs, in total bases, and leads in home runs, but it is his consistent hitting which has most counted. He has driven in more runs which won games than any man in the country, in one game driving in eight runs and making three himself, which is a record.

In substitutes, Philadelphia has greatly the advantage, with Byrne and Dughey (or the infield and Becker for the outfield, while Boston has only Gainer, who can be counted first-class. Hankerson has not materialized this year and, when played regularly, has not been strong, while Janvris is a mediocre player, only valuable because he can play any position in the infield.

The advantages which the Red Sox have are really in their pitchers, who cover their own games at the bat, while none of the Philadelphia pitchers do hit, and only one of them, Alexander, can hit if he wants to. I have seen him in the ninth inning win a game by letting himself out, but at all other times he makes no attempt to risk the chance of injury to his pitching by exerting himself.

On the Defense.
When it comes to the defensive side, what a pitcher must rely on is the combination at second and short, and an outfielder which covers the ground and gets the ball back, and in these respects the nines are about even, Philadelphia slightly the better. Offensively, if it means getting over two or three runs, every man but the pitcher on the Philadelphia team can hit the ball, and Philadelphia has two great cleanup hitters in Gravath and Luder. When it comes to breaking loose and winning a game by a rush the Red Sox have the distinct advantage. They also have the advantage in tied men to stand the strain of a world series. Gainer, Scott and Barry ought to stand it much better than Stock, Bancroft and Niehoff, who are all green—in fact, this is Bancroft's first year in a big league, but he has played wonderful ball. On the other hand, Philadelphia has the great advantage of having played against seven other clubs; every one of whom

ARMY OFFICIALS GIVE BACKING TO SERVICE Y. M. C. A.

That the local army and navy officials will lend their efforts toward establishing Y. M. C. A. branches in the service on Oahu was learned Tuesday afternoon when J. S. Tichenor, national secretary of the army and navy work in Y. M. C. A. circles, and F. A. McCarl, western secretary, accompanied by Paul Super, general secretary of the local association, visited the posts around Honolulu. Everywhere they visited they were cordially greeted, and the many army officers stated that they would give their approval to the movement.

The first visit made, was a call on Maj-gen. William H. Carter, who was very much impressed with the project of establishing an association here. The party next visited Fort Shafter and different points around the city. A visit was made to the O. B. I. depot, which vicinity it is believed would be an ideal location for an association building, as most of the soldiers from Schofield Barracks go and come from this station.

Yesterday afternoon, accompanied by C. B. Hiley, one of the directors of the local association, the secretaries visited Schofield Barracks, where they called upon many of the army officials. They first visited Gen. John P. Wisner, who readily consented to cooperate in the work. The needs of the soldier were stated and the work as outlined was commented upon by all. The party also spent some time with Col. L. W. Kenyon of the 25th Infantry, and Chaplain O. J. W. Scott of the same regiment. Both officials asked about the work that could be done for the soldier of the 25th, and readily consented to give their help in the work. Father Ignatius Realy of the 1st Field Artillery was consulted about the needs of the soldiers, and expressed himself as in favor of the organization of some method that would improve the leisure-time of the men.

At Castner Maj. Julius A. Penn and Chaplain William A. Aiken were visited and both officials agreed to assist further in the work that they have already favored. This afternoon the two secretaries, accompanied by Arthur E. Larimer, are visiting Fort Ruger, Fort De Russy, Fort Armstrong, Pearl Harbor and Fort Kamehameha.

Mr. Tichenor and Mr. McCarl completed their tour of inspection of the army and navy posts yesterday and the remainder of the week will be spent in conferences with directors of the association and business men of the city. Yesterday afternoon Admiral Clifford J. Boush, Lieut.-col. Frank W. Coe of Fort Kamehameha, Capt. Norris Stanton and other officials were visited, and all were active in promising their support to any movement that would bring about better conditions for the men of the service during leisure hours.

HOSPITAL FOR CHILDREN ASKS AID FROM CITY

With an annual expenditure approximating $12,000, and an income of not more than $3500, the Kaneohe Children's Hospital, by authority of its trustees, seeks aid from the city. W. O. Smith, treasurer of the institution, has written to the board of supervisors setting forth the needs of the hospital, which are now approximately $2500 annually.

"It will be seen," writes Mr. Smith, "that the present revenue from all sources is not sufficient to meet the current expenses, and the trustees feel constrained to seek some assistance from the city and county."
